

Removing Acrylic Screen Ink from Clothes

Treat the Stain Before It Dries /

Your best chance for removing acrylic paint stains is to act quickly. Immediately wash off with water and a paper towel or rag.

Your best bet is to try scraping the paint off of the fabric using a scraper, soap, and water. However, there's a chance the scraping method will damage the clothing you're attempting to clean, so it's better to act before the stain dries.

If the ink is dry /

Rubbing alcohol (Isopropyl), or de-natured alcohol and some nail varnish removers, and even an alcohol-based hairspray all work well.

Rub the product on the stain until you begin to see some of the color transferring from the fabric to the cloth. You can also try using a toothbrush to further scrub the spot as your working. Always be sure to test on an inconspicuous area first.
